

Everything you need to know about the alien life form

Updated: Saturday, August 18, 2018

We're calling them the 'life forms.'

Some, like Dr. Amon Teicher in the Australian series will tell the survivors, they are 'sentient' but that doesn't stop the survivors who have witnessed humanity's genocide from wanting revenge.

Here's everything you need to know to get started.

- They are ubiquitous throughout space
- They live in dark space
- They are dormant until they detect chemical signals of a biosphere turning toxic due to the activities of the indigenous intelligent life form, generally caused by overbreeding
- They arrive through a portal, likely a mini wormhole into the upper atmosphere
- In their first form, in a new biosphere, they are embedded as electrically charged spores in a weather event. The event covers the entire planet for a portion of one day and targets the number one predator on that planet vaporising most of them in the storm but not all of them
- The storm is violent and when it is over, a rain of human ash will fall over your earth
- The survivors will be retained by the lifeform so they can;
  - take them over and inhabit their human form or
  - breed with them because they have the required DNA that will enable them to create offspring with the Sentient

- Once the life form takes over a human they embed their DNA in our cells and reboot us
- The Sentient do not breed with each other. They require the surviving humans possessing the right DNA mix to breed
- The offspring of human and the life form, in our case, will be Hyper Sapiens, capable of using touch to ingest life force from any living thing, meaning, our species no longer has to predate / kill to live. The touch can also give energy / healing to another living thing
- Their arrival means the end for Homo Sapiens
- Note; whilst they select some human beings to breed with that doesn't mean that their intentions will be reciprocated. They will find ways of heightening their appearance and sexual allure. They will be aggressive in their approach
- Whilst they select some to live, others who have survived by accident such as submariners or miners, who do not have the required DNA are perceived as a threat to the life form and they may kill them using their T-lux emissions
- When the lifeform takes over humans, it will take their bodies to water, any water, a pond, a lake, the ocean, a swimming pool. Their conversion process creates immense heat
- When they arrive on land for the first time, they appear translucent black and filled with stars. The stars are hundreds of tiny reactors, their paxornium power source
- The life form moderates its operating system and power using Paxornium. Paxornium is the life form's own nuclear power source and they bring it with them. Paxornium provides a core power source but is unstable. They are in a constant state of decay. Atomization of plant and animal life stabilizes them. They achieve this by touch
- Early on, when they don't know how powerful they are, they can accidentally kill living things with this touch. Later on, they may choose to do that on purpose
- They can heal or pass on that energy to other living things
- Their presence initially disrupts any electrically powered item as does the initial storm. Later their local presence disrupts local power. They eventually learn to moderate that outcome, if they choose to
- They experience an arc of innocence and wonder through to cynicism and hate
- Their sexuality is wild, animal and focused
- Some are capable of transforming to take on the full human form. The process is painful and creates a great deal of heat
- Not all of the lifeforms can master the human form to manifest the look of their original host. Most will remain translucent black with the star thing going on. Only a small portion will become the Alphas, capable of manifesting the full form of their host and breeding

- The Alphas will have a following of the formless who are naturally geared to support them but this starts to go wrong when the human personality imprint takes over
- The lifeform masters our operating system, enabling peak performance so the fat lose weight, the skinny gut muscles etc. They are strong, nimble and fast. In short they become leaner meaner and keener
- They emit T-lux rays to scan. The scanning creates resonance within objects. They can determine what is in a room or environment by using that scanning. The city sounds like a Tibetan singing bowl with their presence
- They are aural-centric. They see sound and hear it in greater depth/detail They can also be shocked or disabled by a loud sound like a flashbang
- So, where does it go wrong?
  - The difference between the Alphas and the formless, (the translucent black lifeforms) creates envy on the part of the formless. They cannot have what the Alphas can
  - The expectation that the formless must serve the Alphas creates resentment and leaders rise up among the formless
  - When the Alphas meet someone from their host's past, it triggers emotional bonds. Just the smell, look or touch will do it. They can become 'attached or fixated to one human, for example a former partner, and that can lead to extreme action against anyone who threatens that bond even if that bond is not reciprocated
  - As they become more and more human they struggle to cope with the basics of the human journey, lust, desire, loneliness, jealousy and so forth
  - Most of the human survivors perceive the life forms as either
    - demons
    - dangerous
    - an opportunity for enslavement
    - an opportunity to master their power

All of the above result in human attacks, capture, torture and radicalization of the life forms.

Those that escape are permanently altered and filled with hatred and a need for revenge. As the lifeform is telepathic, it communicates this hate like a virus spreading it to the others and creating an army.

The life forms then learn when they combine their forces and their T-lux emissions they can use the vibration of their emissions to shatter guns, knees, explode hearts, eyeballs, buildings and do some really terrifying things.

They come and go in less than 11 years. Just enough time to breed and raise children to basic awareness. It is a one way trip for this life form. They do not survive. Their legacy is their offspring, the hyper sapiens.

They can talk. They rarely do. Why? It's like owning a Soviet Lada and a German Porsche. Yes, you can choose to drive the Soviet Lada but why would you?

- They feel no need for small talk
- They are telepathic at visual distance, (with each other)
- They can touch you to impart what they have seen and felt. You will see and experience the same events

So, when do they talk?

Save it for dramatic moments. In the Australian series, the life form named, 'The Beast' by the survivors is being systematically tortured when one of the religious zealot survivors asks the question, 'Who sent you?' The Beast replies, 'God.' Perhaps the first and last words spoken by this character but WOW.

They are part of God's plan for intelligent life in the universe and they know it.

As we grow near to the end of the series we will see four of the strongest of the Sentient leaders wage a war against the human survivors. They will be known as the 'riders of the apocalypse.' This is not biblical prophecy being played out. This is the actions of zealot survivors manifesting an outcome of their own making.

Conclusion

All of this hopefully creates significant drama and action possibilities.
